Discover this stunning garden at the heart of Courcelles. This former urban wasteland now features educational vegetable patches, areas for wildflowers, a wide variety of birds, mammals and insects.

The different areas

- Educational vegetable patches where 350 varieties of vegetables, condiments and herbs are grown
- An experimental field for permaculture, organic composting
- A wild tree planted area leaving plenty of space for herbs, orchids... to spread
- Another tree planted area (beech, ash trees...)

All are home to mammals (squirrels, voles...), birds (sparrows, titmice, woodpeckers, jays...) and insects (bees, ladybirds, chrysoprane, machaons...).

"Understanding and learning to better protect" is the motto of this garden... hence its different approach:

- socio-professional insertions garden (training for green trades)
- educational garden (training, teaching, raising awareness)
- garden for exchanges with the public
- natural garden (managing green spaces, valorising species)
- garden for all senses (touching, smelling, listening, tasting, observing...)
- playful garden (games and animations)
